

Look at the resource below, which shares the experiences of some children who feel they are different from others.

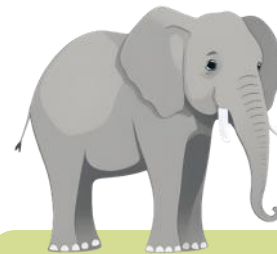

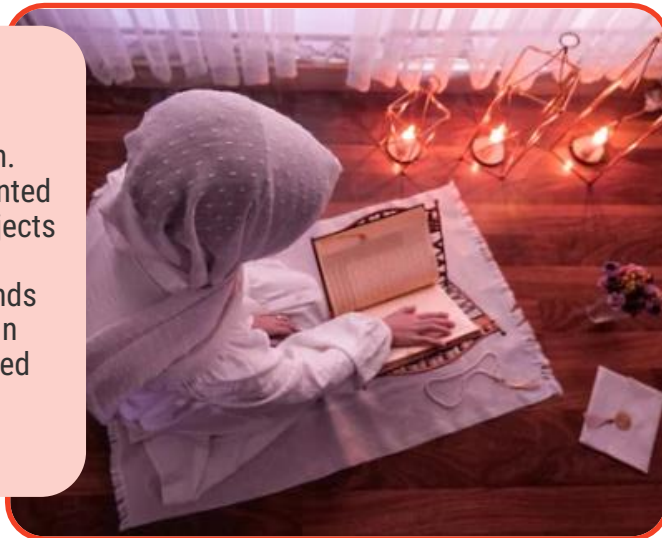

I haven't been able to use my legs since I was born. I love playing basketball. Each Tuesday, after school, my gran takes me to play basketball with other wheelchair users. We get to stay after to have juice and biscuits too!

I'm from Poland and at home I speak Polish. My dad was invited into school to read one of my Polish story books. Even though my friends didn't understand the words, they enjoyed listening and looking at the pictures.

This week, we have been learning about my religion. The teacher asked if I wanted to bring in any special objects from home to help our learning, so I did. My friends were all really interested in what I had to say and asked me some thoughtful questions!

Sasha likes playing with the elephants. I don't really like elephants, but I don't mind using them in my games with Sasha. It's fun!
